Introduction to green transition topic	You may have heard that the world's climate is changing due to increases in temperature over the past 100 years. In this survey, the term “green transition” means the transition towards climate neutral and environmentally sustainable economies and societies to tackle climate change, including through increasing the share of energy produced from renewable sources (wind, solar, ocean energy). A “fair green transition” will ensure that no one is left behind during the green transition, particularly workers and households who are most affected by it, especially those already in vulnerable situations. In other words, this means making our economies and societies climate neutral and environmentally sustainable while at the same time ensuring equal opportunities, access to the labour market, fair working conditions, and social protection and inclusion.

ASK ALL
Introduction to green transition topic	Vous avez peut-être entendu parler du fait que le climat mondial se modifie en raison des hausses des températures observées depuis un siècle. Dans le cadre de cette enquête, le terme de « transition écologique » désigne la transition vers des économies et des sociétés durables en termes climatiques et environnementaux, notamment en augmentant la part d’énergie produite à partir de sources renouvelables (éolienne, solaire, marine). Une « transition écologique juste » permettra de garantir que personne n’est laissé de côté, en particulier les travailleurs et les foyers qui en sont le plus affectés, notamment les plus vulnérables. En d’autres termes, cela implique de rendre nos économies et nos sociétés plus durables climatiquement et environnementalement tout en garantissant l’égalité des chances, l’accès au marché du travail, des conditions de travail équitables, l’inclusion et une protection sociale.

CAWI SURVEY ONLY

TECHNICAL SPECIFICATIONS

Between the 30th of May and 28th of June 2022, Kantar carried out wave 97.4 of the EUROBAROMETER survey at the request of the European Commission, Directorate-General for Communication, "Media monitoring and Eurobarometer" Unit.

Wave 97.4 covers the population of the respective nationalities of the European Union Member States, residents in each of the 27 Member States and aged 15 years and over.

The basic sample design applied in all countries and territories is a multi-stage, random (probability) one. In each country, a number of sampling points were drawn with probability proportional to population size (for a total coverage of the country) and to population density.

In order to do so, the sampling points were drawn systematically from each of the "administrative regional units" after stratification by individual unit and type of area. They thus represent the whole territory of the countries surveyed according to the EUROSTAT NUTS II (or equivalent) and according to the distribution of the resident population of the respective nationalities in terms of metropolitan, urban and rural areas³⁶.

In each of the selected sampling points, a starting address was drawn at random. Further addresses (every 'N'th address) were selected by standard "random route" procedures from the initial address. In each household, the respondent was drawn at random (following the "closest birthday rule"). If no one answered the interviewer in a household, or if the respondent selected was not available (not present or busy), the interviewer revisited the same household up to three additional times (four contact attempts in total). Interviewers never indicate that the survey is conducted on behalf of the European Commission beforehand; they may give this information once the survey is completed, upon request.

The recruitment phase was slightly different in the Netherlands, Finland, and Sweden. In these countries, a sample of addresses within each areal sampling point (1km² grid) was selected from the address or population register (in Finland, the selection is not made in all sample points, but in somewhere, response rates are expected to improve). The selection of addresses was made in a random manner. Households were then contacted by telephone and recruited to take part in the survey. In the Netherlands, a dual frame RDD sample (mobile and landline numbers) is used. The selection of numbers on both frames is made in a random manner, with each number getting an equal probability of selection. Unlike Sweden and Finland, the sample is un-clustered. Please see the figure below.

Consequences of the coronavirus pandemic on fieldwork

Face-to-face interviewing

Where feasible, interviews were conducted face to face in people's homes or on their doorstep and in the appropriate national language. In all countries and territories where face-to-face interviewing was not feasible, CAWI (Computer-Assisted Web Interviewing) was used.

For face-to-face interviews conducted, hygiene and physical distancing measures were respected at all times in line with government regulations, and whenever possible, interviews were conducted outside homes, on doorsteps, in order to stay outside and maintain social distance.

Face-to-face and online interviewing

In Belgium, Czechia, Denmark, Estonia, Latvia, Malta, the Netherlands, Slovenia, Finland and Sweden, face-to-face interviewing was feasible, but it was not possible to reach the target number of face-to-face interviews within the fieldwork period due to the long-lasting impacts of COVID-19 pandemic, many potential respondents are still reluctant to open their homes to interviewers, even if they respect hygiene rules and physical distancing, such as wearing masks and using hydro-alcoholic gel. Therefore, to hit the target number of interviews within the fieldwork period, additional interviews were conducted online with Computer-Assisted Web Interviewing (CAWI) technique.

Recruitment for online interviews

The online design in each country differed based on what was feasible within the fieldwork period. Where feasible, the online sample was based on a probabilistic sample design. Those recruited to the online survey were recruited through a single mobile frame or dual frame Random Digit Dialling (RDD) design. In this way, the entire phone-owning population in each country had a non-zero chance of being sampled. The choice of whether to use a single mobile frame or dual frame (mobile and landline) was dependent on the countries' landline infrastructure. Where the landline infrastructure is suitably advanced to support a significant minority of residential households with landline phones, a dual-frame design is employed. The mix of mobile and landline samples is designed to maximise the representation of the responding sample. The RDD sample for both the mobile and landline samples is drawn from the country's telephone numbering plan. The landline sample frame is stratified by NUTS3 regions based on their prefix, and the mobile by an operator before a systematic random sample of numbers is generated proportional in size to the total generatable numbers in each stratum. Respondents were recruited using this sample design in Belgium, Czechia, Latvia, Lithuania, Malta and Slovenia.

In Finland, Denmark, and Sweden, RDD samples were not used; instead, the telephone sample was drawn from the country telephone directory. In these three countries, the telephone directories offer comprehensive coverage of the phone-owning population, storing both landline and mobile phone numbers for each individual.

In the Netherlands, two survey modes were used to collect responses, face-to-face and online. For the online mode, the respondents were initially recruited to take part through an offline mode of recruitment via a probability-based dual frame overlapping RDD sample design. In this way, the entire phone-owning population in the Netherlands had a non-zero chance of being sampled. The mix of mobile and landline samples is designed to maximise the representation of the responding sample. The RDD sample for both the mobile and landline samples is drawn from the country's telephone numbering plan. The landline sample frame is stratified by NUTS3 regions based on their prefix, and the mobile by an operator before a systematic random sample of numbers is generated proportional in size to the total generatable numbers in each stratum.

Response rates

For each country, a comparison between the responding sample and the universe (i.e. the overall population in the country) is carried out. Weights are used to match the responding sample to the universe on gender by age, region and degree of urbanisation. For European estimates (i.e. EU average), an adjustment is made to the individual country weights, weighting them up or down to reflect their 15+ population as a proportion of the EU 15+ population.

Special Eurobarometer 527

Perceptions of the green transition

The response rates are calculated by dividing the total number of complete interviews by the number of all the addresses visited, apart from ones that are not eligible but include those where eligibility is unknown. For wave 97.4 of the EUROBAROMETER survey, the response rates for the EU27 countries, calculated by Kantar, are displayed in the table on the right.

Margins of error

Readers are reminded that survey results are estimations, the accuracy of which, everything being equal, rests upon the sample size and upon the observed percentage. With samples of about 1,000 interviews, the real percentages vary within the following confidence limits. This is reflected in the table with the statistical margins below.
